Hi! I am recovering very well - it just takes a while for the body's soft tissues to completely heal. My incision (belly button area) is still a little puffy and sore. I've got about two weeks to go until I can resume ALL activity (I am more active than I thought - I pine for some more rigorous exercise, but good god, not a hernia). Amazingly, I don't miss the kidney at all, truly not at all, and the whole thing, the very possibility, now seems like a miracle. I'm thrilled with how it all worked out.

Happy writing! I'm so glad we got to check in with each other! Be well.

Hello, Dawn!

Ah yes-- I did see on Facebook that you donated your kidney. What a tremendous thing! It makes me so glad to know that there are people like you in the world, so very generous and giving. Are you recovering comfortably?

And that is awesome about the teaching gig-- don't stop!

Cheers,
Sonya

Hooray! That's awesome!

I think you're aware that I donated my kidney this summer.. Right? That's what I've been up to for the last month, and now back to writing (and teaching! I got a surprise summer section of nonfiction from WWLA).

Love,
Dawn

Hello, Dawn!

Oh, it's so fantastic to hear from you. And yes, I've been writing like made this July, since I have three precious weeks off to concentrate on that. It's amazing. How have you been, my dear?

Cheers,
Sonya
